

Welcome Chaperones!

Thank you for visiting us today. We invite you to use this guide as you explore WOW! Children's Museum and our Blowing in the Wind exhibit. Asking questions and observing things together is a fun way to engage children. Please take this home with you and keep learning!

We can't see air, but air is made of something. See how air and wind affect other objects by using any of the objects in the room. Make your own crafts to test and keep. Try out different objects, design different crafts, and explore ways to hold or launch something into the air.

Below are some questions to ask children. It's okay if they don't have an answer or if you can't answer one of their questions. Just encourage them to keep exploring to answer those questions on their own.

- Hold your hand over a fan. What do you feel?
- Which object or craft will go the highest?
- Try launching your object over a different part of the fan.

Please write down any interesting comments or important questions and give them to your group's teacher or leader after the field trip:

We noticed that: _____

Our favorite part was: _____

We still wonder about: _____

Thanks again, and have FUN!
